BEHIND CLOISTERED WALLS IN CORNWALL

Mrs. Florence Maybrick a Prisoner in the Country Home of the Sisters of Epiphany, at Truro—Is Living Under Assumed Name and Shut Out From World.

London, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Maybrick is serving out the last few months of her life sentence for the killing of her husband in the quiet country home of the Sisters of Epiphany at Truro, Cornwall, under an assumed name and with her identity completely hidden. She is guarded from communication with the outside world as jealously as if she were still in Aylesbury prison. Though the fresh Cornwall air is bringing the color back to her cheeks, the strain of her fourteen years of confinement, commencing with the imposition of the death sentence, passed under the severe discipline of various prisons, is still evident in her careworn look. This, however, is the only outward sign she shows of her ordeal.

Even the sisters with whom she associates and the servants have no idea that she really is Mrs. Maybrick. She wears an ordinary black dress with a white frill at her throat. She occupies a pleasant, simply furnished room in the home, and rises at 6 o'clock each morning.

FREEDOM IN CHAINS. Though a free agent in many ways, she is obliged to conform to the strict discipline of the convent. She takes her meals in silence and is not allowed to converse except on religious topics during the day. At tea-time, when for an interval the sisters are permitted to talk of mundane things, Mrs. Maybrick retires to her own room. She must be in bed by 9 o'clock. No newspapers are allowed her, and only such books as are given her by the sisters. At first newspapers were surreptitiously supplied her, but it was discovered and a severe reprimand followed.

During a part of the day Mrs. Maybrick works in silence in the sewing-room with the sisters, who make all their own clothing. Last Sunday she attended service in the Truro cathedral and she has been allowed to walk about the town accompanied by one of the sisters. Mrs. Maybrick is supposed to be recovering from an attack of influenza, and passes merely as one of many visitors to the sisterhood who pay for their accommodation. She will remain in charge of the sisters until she is released next July, though before that time, when the weather improves, she will be removed, probably, to the convalescent home under the same management.

IRRIGATION MEETING.

Land Owners of Utah County Discuss the Utah Lake Project at Provo.

(TRIBUNE SPECIAL) Provo, Feb. 6.—A largely attended meeting of the land-owners of Utah county interested in the Utah lake reservoir project was held in Provo today. A committee appointed at last year's meeting, composed of Roder Farrer of Provo, H. T. Reynolds of Springville, E. S. Hickley of Provo, M. E. Snell of Spanish Fork, Theodore Farley of Provo, B. A. Walker of Pleasant Grove and B. K. Foster of Provo, through their chairman, Mr. Farrer, reported that they had held meetings with Salt Lake county people and the Government representatives, and had discussed the different plans for increasing the water supply, and believed that a better understanding now existed between all parties interested than ever before.

The scheme of reserving Utah lake by the Government was discussed at some length, the meeting being about equally divided on the question. All conservative speakers favored the project outlined by the Government, provided reservoirs were built in the mountains and the supply of water increased for the high lands and lands that would be drained by reducing the area of the lake in this county.

Judge John B. Miller of the Utah lake commission read the measurements of the lake during the years 1902 and 1903, showing that the present pumping plant which supplies the farmers of Salt Lake county with water had only reduced the level of the lake two inches in the two years.

The Judge also read a portion of an agreement between the land-owners of Salt Lake and Utah counties which permits storage of the water. A. A. Glazier, introduced resolutions endorsing the reservoir project as outlined by the Government officials, provided it does not raise the water above the compromise point, favoring high land reservoirs and diverting the Euche and Strawberry rivers into Utah lake through the Spanish Fork river.

The resolutions created a lively discussion and the meeting adjourned without action being taken.

A kouluks Texas steer, he of the long horns and vicious disposition, created a panic on the streets of the city yesterday. The animal escaped from the stockyards of the Ogden Packing company. The bovine nearly ran down a pedestrian on Twenty-fourth street and then pursued its way up the street.

Senior Robles, the Spanish bull fighter, was on the street and wanted to be allowed to attack the animal, but Fred Schlegel, manager of the packing company, preferred the safer method of a netting.
